

“My Blackberry isn’t working!”

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=kAG39jKi0II>

Fill the gaps. Most of the missing items consist of puns on words associated with I.T. Can you explain the double meanings?

Scene: At the greengrocer’s

Customer: I bought something from you last week and I’m very disappointed.

Shopkeeper: Oh yeah? What’s the problem?

Customer: My blackberry isn’t working.

Shopkeeper: What’s the matter? It run out of _____?

Customer: No, it’s completely _____.

Shopkeeper: Oh yeah, I can see that. I tell you what, let’s try it on _____.

Customer: That’s got a few _____, you see.

Shopkeeper: Oh yeah, sorry about that.

Customer: Well, do you think you can get my blackberry working?

Shopkeeper: It could be an _____ issue. Where do you _____ that blackberry?

Customer: It’s on my _____.

Shopkeeper: Well, you could try using a _____ to _____ the blackberry to the _____. Then after you’ve done that, you might want to _____ the blackberry from the _____.

Customer: I’ve already tried that a few times, I mean, all it did was mess up _____.

Shopkeeper: Well, it might be worth waiting a couple of weeks. They’ve got the latest blackberry that’s coming in then.

Customer: Well, could you give me a _____?

Shopkeeper: Certainly.

Customer: Let me put that _____ in my diary.

Shopkeeper: Anything else I can help you with?

Customer: Yes, I’ve also got a problem, to be honest, with my _____.

Shopkeeper: Oh dear, oh dear, that is an old _____ isn’t it? When did you buy that?

Customer: Last week.

Shopkeeper: Last week? They’ve _____ two new _____ since then! What’s the problem with it?

Customer: Well, I tried to put my _____ in it and it won’t fit.

Shopkeeper: Oh yeah? And how big’s your _____?

Customer: Well, I don't know much about these things, but my wife's seen a few _____ in her time and she says it's a little bit on the small side.

Shopkeeper: I'm afraid there's not a lot I can do about that. Tell you what, let me try _____ it. It's _____ . Anything else I can help you with?

Customer: Well funnily enough, yes. My grandson's birthday's soon, you see. He's already got an _____ and a _____ , I mean, have you got anything else that he might just like?

Shopkeeper: Well, we're doing a special offer on these. I mean, I can't make head or tail of them, but the kids seem to like them. _____ , £3.60.