

The age of the music festival is passing

Level 3 • Advanced

had. At Live Aid, he went out and saw that audience and just grabbed it.”

13 But, the next Queen was still far from being formed, he said. “We’re not producing a new generation of this kind of act. Coldplay is probably the last one to come up and that was ten years ago. There isn’t much out there that looks like it is forming the next generation of heritage artists.

14 “So, with no big acts to headline, there are no big shows. Glastonbury has got to the point where it can’t find any more big acts and that’s the pinnacle of the festivals. They are really over.”

© Guardian News and Media 2015

First published in The Observer, 30/05/15